FROM THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

COMMUNITY / NEIGHBORHOOD ASSOCIATIONS
PROFESSIONAL PROGRAM FOR A 10-MEMBER DELEGATION FROM ODESA AND MYKOLAYIV OBLASTS, UKRAINE

In Northwest Ohio, USA: September 20- October 11, 2006

USAID-World Learning Community Connection Program locally organized by the Great Lakes Consortium for International Training and Development

September 2006

10 professionals from Ukraine will participate in a three-week program to examine the system of non-governmental organizations and other forms of local democracies in the U.S. whose goals are to unite residents of communities (blocks, streets, neighborhoods) within municipalities and to represent their interests in local decision-making and community development. The group will study the U.S. experience of these organizations and the type of activities they engage in.

The community/neighborhood associations (self-organized bodies within a larger population) that represent to the American experience in local democratic initiatives will improve the ability of neighborhood and community associations in Ukraine to interact with municipalities, to identify a spectrum of appropriate activities. It will enhance and strengthen their human resource potential and their capability to adequately respond to the needs of their communities.

The delegation will stay with NW Ohio area host families to experience the everyday life, culture and the diversity of Members of the delegation are representatives from community/neighborhood associations (Bodies of Self-organization of the Population) including those who have prior experience in mobilizing residents, communicating with local governments, and establishing network connections among similar groups. The delegation also includes representatives of local government who are responsible for relations with neighborhood associations, and representatives of NGOs that provide support services to such associations. The guests have a successful past history in community decision-making and devote 50% to 100% of their work-time in the respective organization in two neighboring oblasts: Odesa and Mykolayiv. Guests do not speak English, but two interpreters will assist the delegation.

territorial communities have begun to play an important role in the system of Ukrainian local governance. In 2001, the Ukrainian Parliament passed legislation that allowed for the creation of non-governmental territorial associations (Bodies of Self-Organization of the Population) within municipalities. Odesa and Mykolayiv are two oblasts that took advantage of the new law and they set up community/neighborhood associations.

The role of community/neighborhood associations are expected to increase further as a result of a shift to proportional elections (by political party lists) to local councils beginning in March 2006. Thus, neighborhood associations will remain the key instrument through which territorial communities can represent their interests and play an active part in local community development. Exposure America. The delegation will participate in several public events and will share their experience with our community.

We thank all professional partners, host families and volunteers for your support for this program.

The overall objective of the program is to utilize the know-how of community/ neighborhood associations in the U.S. in order to increase the capacity of similar emerging Ukrainian associations in the following areas:

- Developing relations with municipal self-government bodies and local businesses

- Studying how the process of delegation of authority is managed

- Learning how associations are accountable to their communities

- Establishing public-private partnerships for community development in the selected regions: Odesa and Mykolayiv oblasts.

The guests will be exposed to diverse experience in three states of the U.S: in Toledo and Northwest Ohio as well as in the Cleveland area in Ohio, Detroit area in Michigan and Chicago area in Illinois. The program includes panel discussions, site visits and consultation with representatives of local government, leaders of various community/ neighborhood associations, training providers and experts in community organizing, as well as NGO's providing services to community associations.

The itinerary will provide opportunities for the visitors to

- Observe how communities in the U.S. work together to determine which formal responsibilities can be delegated from local governments to associations.

- Learn how U.S. local communities communicate their intentions to local governments; so they will be able to lobby their interests upon program completion;

- Learn how to involve local businesses and media in their activities;

- Learn how to organize community outreach, support their activities and needs from local sources;

- Learn how to educate and motivate community residents to actively participate in the organization of their neighborhoods;

- Learn how to organize coalitions and partnership-building events to voice their concerns and suggestions to local governments;

- Evaluate which community structure is best suited to carry out community projects and take on specific responsibilities.

The current law on forming territorial organizations in Ukraine lacks clear mechanisms for the transfer of authority from formal administrative structures to these types of organizations. Yet they are allowed to assume responsibility for things such as communal services. In some cases this can lead to an abuse of power on the part of governmental structures and corruption manifested in the demand for bribes, kickbacks, etc. Since many of the guests represent either local governments or housing associations (made up of one or several buildings), they need to study the importance of maintaining and assuring transparency in the processes in which they are engaged – contracts, tenders, all fiscal reporting. A special emphasis will be on the ethical standards and responsibilities of association heads, members, government officials, civil servants, as well as the mandatory and self-regulating practices that are effective in the U.S. Additionally, visitors will observe different models of resource mobilization, advocacy campaigning, building of public-private partnerships that they will apply at home.

By the end of the program visitors will create their individual Action Plans how to implement ideas they gained during the training and to introduce special projects, as well as a joint Action Plan for the delegation on how they can work together on certain programs and ideas after their return.

As a result of this program, visitors will have a very real opportunity to implement changes in Ukraine, as community/neighborhood associations become contact points for citizens to interact with local authorities. The experience, the training and new connections in the U.S. will help the guests to become educated representatives of community/neighborhood associations who can boost public participation in community decision making in Ukraine.

It is anticipated that cross-sector partnerships can be formed on a number of issues incl. between local government and neighborhood/community associations as well as partnerships with business and media. These cross-sector partnerships can provide support for program administration, and can attract more people to get involved in community development. Sharing best practices among similar neighborhood/community organizations and building cooperation with each other will contribute less expensive and cost effective program implementation.

About Odessa and Mykolayiv Oblasts, Ukraine

These two neighboring oblasts are located in southwestern Ukraine at the shore of the Black Sea.

Odessa Oblast has a population of 2,4 million, nearly 40% of whom live in the City of Odessa. Significant branches of the oblast's economy are oil refining & chemicals processing, transportation (important sea and river ports, oil pipelines and railway), viticulture and other forms of agriculture, notably the growing of wheat, maize, barley, sunflowers and sugar beets. The region's industrial capability is principally concentrated in and around Odessa. Odessa Oblast includes 26 raions and 19 cities.

City of Odessa - known as the "Pearl of the Black Sea"- is the 5th largest city in Ukraine, the largest city along the Black Sea, and the most important city of Ukraine for trade. The 212-year-old city has its ethnically diverse population of more than one million, wide range of industries, naval base, fishing fleets, and large port, and it is Ukraine's most important city for external trade. Odessa is also a popular tourist destination.

But living standards plummeted after the onset of transition and, by the mid-1990s Odessa was in the midst of a severe social crisis. The city lacked basic affordable housing and its water supply was contaminated. The Odessa Participatory Initiative in 1995 was the first step to involve citizens to tell their governments what services they need or how well these services are being delivered. In fact, one of the major problems threatening the sustainability of development efforts in the countries of the former Soviet Union has been the lack of public voice in decision-making.

Mykolayiv Oblast has a population of 1,2 million. Almost 60% of urban population resides in the City of Mykolayiv (pop. 512,000), the industrial, cultural and administrative center of Mykolayiv Oblast. The City of Mykolayiv is a major ship building center of Ukraine and an important riverport.

The city has 3 major shipyards some of which capable of building large navy ships. Other important industries are mechanical engineering, power engineering, metallurgy and cosmetics.

Mykolayiv Oblast is subdivided into: 19 raions, and 5 of its cities are designated as separate raions within the oblast.
